Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

a. Claims 1 and 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Benderev '745 in view of Leivseth et al. Benderev discloses a shaft (12), a pressure element (22) and a feedback element (col. 5, line 64 and col. 6, lines 9-15). Regarding the language, "responsive to pressure applied to the exterior of the pelvic muscle exercise device" and "for providing feedback to the patient responsive to a predetermined threshold of said pressure sensitive element" has not been given patentable weight because the limitation is purely functional and does not recite any structure. Benderev discloses all of the limitations except for the device being pressure sensitive. Leivseth et al teaches a pressure sensitive device. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to associate the shaft with a device responsive to applied pressure from a user. As to claim 8, the feedback is vibration (col. 8, line 39

b. Claims 1-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Benderev '467 in view of Leivseth et al. Benderev discloses a shaft (12), a pressures sensitive element and a feedback element (26; col. 8, lines 23-25 and col. 9, line 35). Benderev discloses all of the limitations except for the device being pressure sensitive. Leivseth et al teaches a pressure sensitive device. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to associate the shaft with a device responsive to applied pressure from a user. Regarding the language, “responsive to pressure applied to the exterior of the pelvic muscle exercise device” and “for providing feedback to the patient responsive to a predetermined threshold of said pressure sensitive element” has not been given patentable weight because the limitation is purely functional and does not recite any structure. As to claims 2 and 15, further comprising a withdrawal device (58). As to claim 3, a sleeve (20) made from a resilient material [0060]. As to claims 8-9, 16, the feedback is vibration (col. 8, line 24). As to claims 10 and 14, the feedback is outside the vaginal canal (fig. 6). As to claims 6-7, Leivseth teaches a sleeve (27) being replaceable and disposable. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to employ a replaceable and disposable sleeve for the purpose of providing sanitary conditions to the user while under care.
